

The Spencer Lecture Series Presents:

State Merit Aid Policy and Student Academic Choice: Evidence from Kentucky

Jennifer Delaney, Assistant Professor Educational Leadership & Policy Analysis, will discuss her ongoing research on the academic consequences of student financial aid that is awarded on the basis of merit. Her talk will focus on the statewide merit aid program in Kentucky. She will also discuss some of the technical and political issues that graduate students may face when attempting to use student unit record data or state level data systems for their research.

When: December 4, 2007

Where: 220 Teacher Education Building

Time: 3:00-4:00 PM

Light Refreshments will be served.