time

3-4 PM

Training in educational research is often weighted by discussions of method, ideology or practical applications.

Professors Clif Conrad and Rich Halverson will discuss how good research is animated by a spirit of inquiry - a human activity of searching for answers to burning questions. Their presentation will itself be a form of collaborative inquiry as they explore lessons learned and advice for graduate research that emerged from their recent ELPA course "Introduction to Inquiry."

Also, they will make you smile.

Light refreshments will be provided.
